Whilst Jim Cartwright is often cast as a northern realist playwright in the tradition of Willy Russell, Alan Bleasdale and John Godber, the stylistic and structural range of his work transcends such attempts at categorisation. Certainly a number of his texts engage with the bleakly impoverished lives of the northern working-/under-classes.

Two plays by the Lancashire playwright Jim Cartwright, author of Road. Two is an evocation of English pub life, in which two actors play a series of characters. Bed is a surreal journey into old age and sleep.

This collection of Jim Cartwright's plays includes "Road", "Bed", "Two" and "The Rise and Fall of Little Voice".

Jim Cartwright's play focuss on the people living in a working-class neighbourhood of Lancashire in the 1980s, struggling to manage under Margaret Thatcher's government when there were extremely high levels of unemployment. In the course of one wild night, our drunken guide Scullyey conducts a tour of his derelict Lancashire road and we meet the characters that populate his community. Capturing both the struggles and the humour inherent in communities such as this at this time, Jim Cartwright has brought to his play his trademark wit and warmth as well as political edge. Road was Cartwright's theatrical debut and was first performed at the Royal Court Theatre in 1986. It has since become a seminal text for study and performance. The play is here published as a Methuen Drama Student Edition with commentary and notes by John Bennett, Principal Lecturer in Drama, Dance and Performance Studies at Liverpool Hope University.

Set in a pub somewhere in the North of England, owned by a savagely bickering married couple bound together by the necessity of keeping the business afloat.

By the author of "Road", this play embodies an exploration of dreams and sleep. Seven slumbering elderly people share a vast bed to dream, remember and reflect on a long past.

From the author of Road and Fall of Little Voice comes a new play about life in the North.

Sitting among the rows of hills in Superstore supermarket in the North of England, the fortunes of a young checkout girl are on the brink of change ... Linda works the tills at Safeshop. It's what everyone does. The grammar school girls get the careers; the comp girls get the two-bit college courses and the low wage jobs. But when model agent Rafe brings his disposable razors to Linda's till, he recognises the raw talent that could transform both their lives. Almost overnight, Linda becomes Crystalline, a supermodel catapulted onto the international stage. But in the blur of first class flights and flashy restaurants, will she begin to forget where Crystalline ends and Linda begins? The bittersweet story of a young checkout girl's rise to fame, this is prize-winning playwright Jim Cartwright's first novel. Bearing the hallmarks of his best-loved play, THE RISE AND FALL OF LITTLE VOICE and ROAD, this rollicking debut takes the reader on a journey from which there is no going back.
