1987 – Shamanism, Colonialism, and the Wild Man is Published. The Australian anthropologist Michael Taussig ventured to the Colombian Amazon along the Putumayo River in the 1970s where he examined, among other things, the healing work of shaman José García. Taussig went on to become one of the most original voices in anthropology by bringing together an analysis of the colonial, social, and economic worlds of indigenous Colombian peoples.

On Ayahuasca Shamanism and Colonialism - Michael Taussig
Taussig speaks of wildness as a "death space of signification", which implies that rather than expressing subservience to the will of the colonial powers, shamans eliminate meaning as they turn away from civilization.

Review essay: Michael Taussig's Shamanism, Colonialism ...
In Michael Taussig's seminal work, Shamanism, Colonialism and the Wild Man: A Study in Terror and Healing, he leads us down a path that examines the project of Colonialism as it was carried out in South America. He first creates a space of an all-too-real and present terror followed by a process of healing that we as readers are ourselves supposed to follow.

Michael Taussig - Wikipedia
A Study in Terror and Healing " examines the origins of the extraordinary cruelties inflicted by colonial rubber traders upon Colombian Indians and those of the shamanic healing rituals of the Colombian Indians living in the Putumayo foothills. In Taussig's view, both the cruelties and the healing rituals are motivated by a view of the Indian as a Wild Man, that savage from medieval and Renaissance legend, Europe's version of Bigfoot.

Anthropology : Shamanism, Colonialism, and the Wild Man by ...
A lengthy study involving history, anthropology, and reportage, about ""killing and torture and sorcery"" in southwest Colombia, where the author spent some years as a wary visitor. The resulting book is blood-soaked indeed. Whether the subject is the iniquity of colonialism or the evil that tribesmen do unto each other, the picture is dark. There are gory quotes aplenty: ""A woman suckling a ...
